

Paula R. Buchanan is a disaster scientist and emergency management researcher. Her work lies at the intersection of public health, education, and outreach messaging. Ms. Buchanan's research provides insights on how to help us move forward as a national and global community by mitigating, or lessening the impact of, disasters by addressing the following global priority: access to clean drinking water, which is negatively impacted by climate change.

